The one area that really bugs me is the removal of the layers. I don't understand why they did it. Before, if I wanted to create an effect in Fireworks, "Develop," then copy that effect into Photoshop, I could access the layers. Now, I get the new version, I make the file, but now there isn't a way to bring the layers back into the new file. It's been that way in Fireworks for so long. There are layers in the new version, but it's impossible to bring them back in as layers. The reason that Fireworks did this was that the layers in Photoshop would be owned by the original Fireworks document, and you'd end up deleting the layers, which wouldn't work either way. With Photoshop Elements, you can't do that. I hope Adobe will fix that so I don't have to delete the layers from the original document, go back to Elements, and add them again. Adobe Photoshop is still unbeatable photo editing software. Photoshop is one of the best creations of Adobe Company. It's the favorite image editing software for every professional designer. Easy to use for any new bee and you can create anything using your imagination. In Photoshop, Sky is the only limit. Sadly, it did not work for me unless I restarted the computer after starting the download. And the next time I loaded the update, I lost my project. Other than that, the update was a pleasant experience. One bone to pick, though: The update is not listed in the App Store. I had to download it manually via iTunes. (The App Store page is currently updated and says Requires iOS 9.3 or later.) But other than that, I like to keep everything updated and in order.
